BOOST is a European project which aims to support women to build their global competences

The project aims to provide women and professionals in this field with the necessary know-how and tools to use global competences

What does being globally competent mean?

Being globally competent means:

- Living happily in multicultural communities
- Being successful in the labour market of today
- Lifelong learning, staying curious, & being active
- Supporting Sustainable Development Goals
- Using media platforms safely and effectively

The BOOST project will offer:

BOOST Global Competence MOOC:

The BOOST project will offer a multilingual MOOC (Massive Open Online Course) offering flexible micro-learning pathways on global competence for both women and professionals.

BOOST Coaching Programme:

A tailored coaching programme designed to equip professionals with the tools and techniques to support women to advance their career path. The coaching programme will also focus on life choices and encourage women to use their latent skills and talents to cope with challenges they faced in everyday life.

Why the BOOST project?

If you want to improve your global competence skills, then why not check out what the BOOST project has to offer.

You will find a coaching scheme, step-by-step guidance, recommendations, and a toolkit to help you to manage and navigate your career path!
